With the freſheſt ADVICES, FOREIGN and DOMESTIC.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 3.

ON the 22d of laſt Month the Mufti begirt the new Sultan Oſman III. with the Scymetar of the Empire, which Ceremony holds the Place of Coronation in this Country. After which 150 Purſes were diſtributed to the Janiſſaries by Order of his Sublime Highneſs. Some Sailors, vexed that they had no Share of his Liberality, inſulted a Janiſſary as he was coming off Guard. The Fellow complaining to his Comrades, they ran into the Streets that lead to the Harbour with their Swords drawn, cutting down all the Sailors they met; and the Iſſue probably would have been very terrible, had not the High Admiral and the Aga of the Janiſſaries jointly interpoſed. The Sailors who were the firſt Occaſion of this Diſturbance, having been diſcovered and taken, were immediately impaled, without any Form of Proceſs; which reſtored the Quiet of the City. The new Sultan has begun his Government by ſhutting up the Taverns, and enjoining the Precept of the Alcoran, which prohibits the Drinking of Wine, to be ſtrictly obſerved on Pain of ſevere Chaſtiſement. Miniſters are to be ſent to the Courts of Vienna, Ruſſia and Poland, to notify the Emperor's Acceſſion to the Crown. As to the reſt, every Thing ſeems to confirm that his ſublime Highneſs will adopt the pacific Syſtem of his Predeceſſor.

Jan. 4. The new Grand Signior having been ſolemnly begirt with the Scymetar, and from that Inſtant taken the Reins of Government into his Hands, gains the Affection of the People more and more every Day. He has already ſo far won their Hearts, by his Liberality, Moderation, and Prudence, that every one here promiſes himſelf Oſman's Reign will be proſperous and peaceable. His Sublime Highneſs has not only confirmed the old Miniſtry in their ſeveral Poſts, and entered into the ſalutary Principles of his Brother's Government, but he has alſo remitted to the Provinces the Preſents which they were wont to make at the Acceſſion of a new Sultan, and given Orders to all the great Officers of the Empire, to eaſe the People as much as poſſible by leſſening the Taxes, and abſtaining from all Acts of Oppreſſion. He has in particular gained the Army, by diſtributing to each Janiſſary twenty Piaſters, and to each Veteran forty; and it is thought, the Janiſſaries on the Frontiers will receive the like Donatives. This, with the Sums remitted to the Provinces, amount to near eleven Millions. It is to be remarked, that the Janiſſaries did not expect above ten Piaſters each. Oſman has alſo diſtinguiſhed his good Nature by rendering that Part of the Seraglio where the three young Princes are confined, much more commodious, light, and airy, having ordered a Part of the high Wall that furrounded it, to be pulled down. He has alſo ſuffered the eighteen Mooriſh Slaves, that have been turned out of the Seraglio, and ſent into Exile, according to Cuſtom, to keep all the Money and Effects that belonged to them. But Clemency is not the only Virtue of which he has given Proofs. He has gained upon his People by his Love of Juſtice. Complaint being made to him, that four Colonels of the Janiſſaries kept back a Part of their Men's Pay, on frivolous Pretences, he ordered them to be ſtrangled immediately, for an Example to others, and caſhiered four Captains, who connived at this baſe and cruel Fraud.

Mr. Porter, the Britiſh Ambaſſador, was the firſt foreign Miniſter who was admitted to an Audience of the Grand Vizir, to compliment him on Oſman's Acceſſion to the Crown.

Paris, Feb. 14. The ſucceſſive Arrival of ſeveral Couriers from London, and the Accounts they brought of the Vigor and Diſpatch with which the Armament in England is carried on, have occaſioned the ſending of freſh Orders to Breſt and Rochfort, to uſe double Diligence in fitting out the Men of War commiſſioned at thoſe Ports.

We learn by the St. Louis, that the laſt Veſſels which ſailed from Pondicherry with a Reinforcement of Troops, and a freſh Supply of Stores, were not arrived when ſhe came away. Matters between us and the Engliſh in thoſe Parts, were ſtill in a State of Suſpence with regard to War and Peace in the Beginning of laſt April. M. Dupleix, being deſirous to know whether the Engliſh ſincerely intended an Accommodation, had ſent his Nephew to Madraſs furniſhed with very extenſive Powers and Inſtructions; but this Step was not attended with the Succeſs which he promiſed himſelf, and which the Advantage he had gained made him expect. M. Dupleix therefore no longer truſted to any Thing but the Arrival of new Reinforcements, either to give Weight to his Negociation, or to ſtraiten the Engliſh ſtill more in the Poſts they retired to after the Seizing their Convoy.

LONDON.

Letter from Genoa, dated February 9.

"The Diſpoſitions of the Corſican Malecontents do not yet correſpond ſo with the Marquis Doria, as ſome public Papers have given out; nor can we ſay that they run quite counter to them. The Conduct of thoſe Iſlanders has of late been moderate enough; for though they would not accept of Peace on the Conditions propoſed to them, they have conſented to a Suſpenſion of Arms, and cannot be reproached with freſh hoſtile Acts. It is true that this Moderation on their Part may be as much owing to the Winter Seaſon, as to the prudent Conduct of the new Commiſſary General; but whatever the Motive may be, it is certain that the preſent Truce has all the Appearances of Peace. The Republic's faithful Subjects, freed from the continual Apprehenſions of being moleſted, now ſit quietly in their Houſes; and the Partizans of Liberty, who proved themſelves to be better Soldiers than we wiſhed to find them, have lately acted the Part of grave Senators, far beyond what we could have imagined, and have ſhewn themſelves as judicious in Council as they have been bold in the Field. When reduced by the rigorous Seaſon to a ſedentary Life, they ſet themſelves to reflect; and their Reflections have produced ſuch judicious Regulations and ſuch wiſe Laws, that we muſt confeſs, that, had they no Maſters, they would be better intitled than any People to be indpendent. But they have Maſters; and it would be only a Change of Hoſtilities, if, by ceaſing to reſiſt the Republic of Genoa Sword in Hand, they pretend to eſtabliſh their Laws on the Ruin of hers. But this cannot be ſaid to be their Deſign. The Laws they have made are to be conſidered as Precautions againſt the Evils of Anarchy. To avoide the Confuſion and all the Miſchiefs that ſpring from Independency, they have been willing to give a regular Form to their Rebellion, and thus to fill up the Republic's Interregnum, or the Time that may yet elapſe before they come to an Accommodation with her, by eſtabliſhing ſuch Regulations as may preſerve Order and Peace amongſt themſelves. But will they attain this End? Will the Maxims of Government, which they have agreed upon, and which are ſaid to be ſo wiſe, be well obſerved? We can hardly believe it; at leaſt their Conduct hitherto affords Room to Queſtion it; for it is not very likely that Men who have ſhewn themſelves ſo averſe to one Yoke, will conſtantly bear another: The beſt Laws ſometimes meet with the greateſt Oppoſition. But, after all, ſuppoſing the Laws made by the Corſicans ſhould not be ſtrictly obeyed, there would be nothing very ſingular in it: The Laws of other Nations are not ſo religiouſly obſerved, as to warrant our crying out againſt the Corſicans whenever they may violate theirs. However, it is ſtill a greater Matter that they have known how to make Laws: Theſe ſage Productions, to which nothing but a phlegmatic Temper gives Birth, were certainly not expected from the Impetuoſity which hitherto appeared in the Actions of thoſe Iſlanders. From their Behaviour we concluded, that they were very brave Warriors, too brave indeed for the Republic; but who could have concluded from it, that they were good Legiſlators? Or how could we imagine theſe Men were at once Catalinas and Catos? And yet they have ſhewn that they could unite both Characters, with this Difference, that they have been Catalinas in Practice, but as yet are Catos only in Theory. But this is enough to prove that they are ſenſible of the Want of Laws, and know how to make them; from which, and the many Proofs, they have given of their Courage, it follows, that their Accommodation with the Republic of Genoa, if it ever takes Place, will be much more glorious to them: For then there will be no Room for ſaying, that they have yeilded to Force, ſince their Courage has enabled them to reſiſt it; nor to the Neceſſity which all Nations experience, of living under a regular Government, ſince they know how to frame as good a Plan of Government as any People can boaſt of. It will then be manifeſt, if they ſubmit, that it will be on a Principle of Duty, by giving to Cæſar the Things which are Cæſar's; and from a Conviction, that it is not ſufficient to have wiſe Laws, nor even that they be well obſerved; but that they muſt alſo be laudably and meritoriouſly obſerved; which can only be the Caſe of Laws enacted by legal Authority."——If ſo, let the Genoeſe behave as good Maſters for the future, otherwiſe common Senſe will tell the Corſicans and all Mankind, that their Authority cannot be legal.

Feb. 15. By the laſt Accounts from Liſbon and Cadiz, it appears that there are at this Time in thoſe Harbours above an Hundred Sail of Engliſh Merchantmen, ſome of which have been there a long Time for want of Freights. When theſe Ships ſhall arrive, it is not doubted but a ſufficient Number of able Seamen will enter on Board his Majeſty's Fleet, to ſupport the Honor of the Britiſh Flag againſt any haughty Intruders.

We hear that two Gentlemen of very conſiderable Fortunes in Yorkſhire, have lately diſcharged all their French Servants. An Example highly worthy of Imitation at all Times, but more eſpecially at the preſent Criſis.

Feb. 17 We are well aſſured that two Men of War, one of 70 and and one of 90 Guns, are ſailed for India: That Madagaſcar was well fortified, and not in any Danger, in Caſe of an Attempt from the Enemy on the Britiſh Settlements there.

Feb. 22. On Tueſday laſt his Majeſty's Royal Bounty, agreeable to Proclamation, was paid on Board the Albany, Capt. Langden, at Deptford, by the Clerk of the Cheque there, to upwards of fifty Volunteers. This is the firſt Ship that has been paid. The brave Fellows expreſſed great Spirit on this Occaſion. and, with three Huzzas, wiſhed for an Opportunity to curb the Inſolence of the Enemy to the Britiſh Flag. A brave Encouragement for Seamen to enter.

BOSTON, April 14.

On Thurſday laſt arrived here his Majeſty's Ship Succeſs, of 20 Guns, John Rouſe, Commander, in three Days from Halifax.

The ſame Day being appointed for muſtering on the Common in this Town, the New-England Regiment, commanded by his Excellency, near 2000 came in on that Day, and the two following Days, and it is ſaid ſome Hundreds more are daily expected.
